Back to fillin' bellies

Beth Hiltom pours a hot cup of coffee for a customer at the Fillin' Station (better known as the Whately Diner), which reopened last week following repairs to damage caused by an Oct. 2 kitchen fire. The kitchen now sports all-new equipment (replacing some 40-year-old appliances), and business is at least as good as it was before the fire, said manager Frederick Brown. Shortly after the fire, owners had estimated that repairs would take only a few weeks.
